WEEDS

THE efforts of the City authorities to improve the appearance of the streets and vacant lots by a strict enforcement of the weed ordinance ought to have the cordial support of every good citizen. For it does little good for one householder to keep his premises free from weeds where his neighbor penalts a luxurient crop of the unsightly nuisance to flourish. Individual effort can accomplish more in this direction than all the work and vigilance of the Street Department, for if everybody waits to be officially notified and threatened with arrest before beginning to dig, we shall have an abundance of weeds until the snow flies. just as we have had since it disappeared tist spring.

The worst offenders, of course, are the deniers of vecent lots. WILSON'S UNITINISS

NOW that the President has "accepted the resignation" of Mr. Henry Lane Wilson as Airbassador to Mexico or, in less for-... lai language, fired him we are beginning to keen more of that gentleman's utter unfitness for the post he occupied, and of the extent to which his capacity for meddling complicated the Mexican tangle.

It has been clear for some time that Wilson's prejudices seriously impaired his usefulness. He disliked Madero and rejoiced in the efforts of the revolutionists to down him. He openly sided with Huerta even before that worthy turned traitor and inspired Madero's assassination. He committed the American government to Huerta's support before he knew what position it would take.

All this was known long before Wilson was summoned to Washington to explain his course. But now it appears that he is even responsible for the hasty recognition. of Huerta by the French and German governments, an event which, with the similar action by the British government, has vastly increased the difficulties of our State Department by strengthening Huerta's posi-

Yesterday it was announced in Washington that the British government has explained that its recognition of Huerra had been "only a recognition of a provisional president, pending an election." And the British note added that France and Germany had recognized liverta only after the American Ambassador had made a congratulatory speech at a reception given by Huerta to the diplomatic corps.

This throws a flood of light on the situation. Naturally the foreign governments assumed that the American Ambassador correctly interpreted the attitude of his government. When in a formal speech on a state occasion helplainly expressed sentiments fatorable to the new dictator, they took it as an official fint that Huerta was acceptable to the American government, and proceeded to recognize him. And of course such recognition gave Huerta an immense advantage in his efforts to bully the State Department.

It is extremely unfortunate that a man so imbued with partisan feeling, so devoid of tact and sound judgment indeed so utterly lacking in the dvalities that go to make a successful diplomat should have been! brops house the successful diplomat should have been! brops house the street of the American embassy in these to the street of the last six months. It seems plain now that if saute better man than: Wilson had represented the United States There the most serious difficulties of the situation never would have arisen, and wewould not today be face to face with a problem which may turn out to be as bad as the Cuban business fifteen years ago, The only gratifying feature of the affair is that at least he has been placed beyond the capacity to do further harm.

THE CURRENCY BILL

AFTER months of wrangling the House, Committee on Banking and Currency has finally got its currency bill in shape for presentation to the caucus. And the caucus welcomed it with every indication of a keendesire to spend a few more months in the same sort of heated discussion. Chairman Glass of the committee, one of the authors of the hill, will defend it, and Representative Neeley will lead the assault, and the caucus will make a brave pretense of jering the measure to tatters.

But when all is said and done the currency hill is quite likely to remain what it is now 2 Woodrow Wilson measure. The fight in the committee has only emphasized the President's control of the situation, and there is nothing to indicate that it will be different in the caucus. It will be a repetition of the squabble over the tatiff billno important amendment will be made I against his opposition.

The currency bill as it stands appears to be a worthy measure, drafted on the right lines and with several very co-mendable features. Its defects are chiefly those of detail, but there is a charce of these being weeded out before it has gone through Coneress. It would seem from the discussion that has already taken place that the President is in a position to have it amende f ashe rees fit for it is he and not Cangres that is ensering both the corrency and tariff legislation.

CONGRESS AND THE PARCEL POST. From the New York Tribune

- It looks now as if the senate committee on Postoffices and Post Roads would abandon the idea of interfering with Postmaster General Burleson's extensions of the parcel post service. It is reported that some senatorial experts were annoyed because they had figured out tast year to their own satisfaction that parcels over eleven pounds in weight could be carried only -t a loan. Me thirleson says that they can be carried at a profit, judging from the highly profitable business already built up carrying the smaller parcels.

The senate ought to put away its pride of opinion. Congress spent 10 or 15 years conjuring up reasons against developing the purcel post am an agency of public convenience. It was unable to recognize the braidhaddillty of a modernized system long after the public had satisfied itself that the service might to be broadened. Its premises and arguments were all wrong, and it would come with little grace from either the house or the senute to my now to hinder the reorganized system's natural growth.

The interstate commerce commission has apprayed the postmaster general's plane as it is re quilique do under the act of August 24, 1972, and that him oval is sufficient and final. This is a matter in which congress, in the face of its blundering record about gracefully retire to an extreme rear
